Indigene's AW18 collection is inspired by the term "An Arcadian life", a utopian notion of a simple, easy and happy life. Arcadia, a geographical region in Greece developed as a poetic byword during the renaissance for an idyllic vision of nature, harmony and bounty; too good to be true - the unattainable.

The inspiration is translated in the collection through use of 100% handmade, natural fabrics such as khadi cotton, silk and wool. We love the idea of multi-functional dressing and hence, our silhouettes are simple, layered and made as multi-faceted garment separates which can be worn in several different ways.

The natural fabric bases are combined with prints, inspired by traditional hand blocks of floral buttis on dotted background. Embroideries are intricate and elaborate. Textured surfaces, delicate edge work and stitch detailing adds to the garment's uniqueness. Dresses, tunics, wool and embroidered cotton jackets form a part of the collection and offer layering options for the free minded and travel enthusiasts.
